

Leonardo D'Almagro ("dal-MAH-grow") is a fashion stylist who is originally from Venezuela, and started working in the industry in his early teens. He was first involved as an international model, but his strong interpersonal and leadership skills were quickly recognized and he was recruited as a trainer by "Pageants" and the Giorgio Alecci Model Agency to teach proper catwalk techniques, personal branding, and fashion marketing strategies to the models and pageant contestants.

He earned degrees in Advertisement and Marketing, and gained global experience while working in the Marketing departments of several international companies. The fusion of both fashion and marketing backgrounds provides Leonardo with the ability to provide comprehensive consultation services to fashion professionals.

Through his work with various magazines, fashion productions, and television networks (such as Telemundo, Univision, and YNN), Leonardo promotes fashion designers, jewelry designers, make-up and hair artists, photographers, retailers, and production companies, and his projects serve as a platform on which they can expand their markets. He was recently featured in a reality-show segment which focused on the importance of education and professionalism in the industry. He is constantly looking for new talent and, while supporting the use of modeling agencies, also uses models who he personally discovers and trains. By encouraging new and established talents to collaborate with each other, the fashion industry continues to innovate and grow.

Leonardo insists on high quality, and he promotes fashion professionals who share that passion. Because of his strong reputation in the industry, he was chosen by the University of Texas Apparel Design Program to serve as a Fashion Panelist throughout the "Senior Fashion Design Students 2012" competition. He also provided guidance to students as a guest artist of the Paul Mitchell School.

He masterfully finds creative solutions to challenges and thinks 'outside of the box'. He is thankful for the opportunity to have recently featured a talented wheelchair-confined model in a professional fashion look-book. His investment in promoting the well-being of others doesn't stop with professional endeavors. He has devoted countless hours directed towards helping young victims of bullying who have poor self-esteem; Leonardo helps them improve their self-confidence by encouraging them to successfully complete their educational goals, by mentoring them, and sometimes even including them in modeling projects which have been used for marketing clientele.

Leonardo's extensive philanthropic work also includes work with: Casa; The Arc of the Capital Areas, which improves the lives of those with cognitive challenges; Latinitas, which encourages the professional growth and development of young Latina women; and The Horse Boy Foundation, which provides training to those who provide equestrian therapies to those with Autism.

His business savvy, keen fashion taste, strong work-ethic, personal charm, and investment in the well-being of others, have earned Leonardo D'Almagro a strong reputation in the fashion industry.
